ABSTRACT

The European Arab Medical Congress 2025 serves as a distinguished platform dedicated to fostering scientific collaboration, advancing medical research, and promoting innovation across Europe and the Arab world. Convened in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, the Congress embodies the nation's vision of inclusivity, accessibility, and excellence in healthcare, championed by forward-looking leadership and strategic partnerships. Through the collective efforts of the Emirates Scholar Center for Research and Studies and the Emirates Medical Association, this event brings together eminent scholars, policymakers, healthcare professionals, and researchers to exchange expertise and explore emerging trends in medical science and clinical practice. The Congress underscores the critical importance of interdisciplinary collaboration and international cooperation as essential drivers of progress in an era marked by rapid technological advancement and evolving healthcare challenges. By uniting institutions, governments, and nonprofit organizations under a shared commitment to improving patient care and health outcomes, the initiative strengthens regional and global ties within the medical community. Furthermore, it highlights the UAE's role as a hub for scientific dialogue and innovation, contributing to the advancement of evidence-based practices, research capacity-building, and sustainable healthcare development. Ultimately, the European Arab Medical Congress 2025 aspires to inspire lasting partnerships, promote the exchange of cutting-edge knowledge, and elevate the standards of healthcare delivery across borders—making a meaningful impact on the well-being of societies worldwide.
